

cutting through complexity

Review of business combinations accounting

Focus on usefulness and challenges

January 2014, Issue 2014/02

IN THE HEADLINES

kpmg.com/ifrs

“We know that there have been issues with the implementation of IFRS 3, so constituents should take this opportunity to provide feedback based on their practical experience of the standard.”

– Mike Metcalf, KPMG’s global IFRS business combinations and consolidation leader

Focus on usefulness and challenges

To help assess whether its new standards and major amendments are working as intended, the IASB conducts post-implementation reviews as part of its due process. In line with this practice, the IASB has issued a request for information (RfI) on IFRS 3 *Business Combinations*¹. Published on 30 January 2014, this latest RfI seeks formal feedback from constituents on practical issues, and focuses on:

- the usefulness of the accounting and disclosure requirements – especially for users such as investors, analysts and creditors; and
- the challenges in applying the requirements – for preparers, valuation specialists, auditors, standard setters and regulators.

Wide range of feedback sought

The RfI covers the following areas (including example questions), although feedback on other practical implementation issues is welcome.

Definition of a business	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • How difficult is it to distinguish a business from a group of assets? • Is it beneficial to have different accounting treatments?
Fair value	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What challenges have you encountered in measuring fair value?
Separation of intangible assets from goodwill, and negative goodwill	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Is it useful to recognise intangible assets separately from goodwill? • Is the recognition of negative goodwill in profit or loss helpful?
Non-amortisation of goodwill and indefinite-lived intangible assets	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • How useful is goodwill impairment testing? • What difficulties have you encountered in testing goodwill for impairment?
Non-controlling interests (NCI)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does the accounting for NCI actually reflect claims on equity by such shareholders?
Step acquisitions and the loss of control	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • How useful is step acquisition accounting? • Is the remeasurement of the retained investment on the loss of control helpful?
Disclosures	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • What disclosures are not useful? • Would other disclosures be useful?

The IASB is also asking for views on the benefits of the standard, whether its implementation has resulted in considerable unexpected costs, and how it has affected the way in which acquisitions are carried out.

KPMG International Cooperative (“KPMG International”) is a Swiss entity that serves as a coordinating entity for a network of independent firms operating under the KPMG name. KPMG International provides no audit or other client services. Such services are provided solely by member firms of KPMG International (including sublicensees and subsidiaries) in their respective geographic areas. KPMG International and its member firms are legally distinct and separate entities. They are not and nothing contained herein shall be construed to place these entities in the relationship of parents, subsidiaries, agents, partners, or joint venturers. No member firm has any authority (actual, apparent, implied or otherwise) to obligate or bind KPMG International or any other member firm, in any manner whatsoever.

Work plan still to be decided

The scope of the RfI is broad, and includes a number of areas of diversity that have previously been considered by the IASB and/or the IFRS Interpretations Committee – e.g. the definition of a business in the real estate sector.

However, the broad nature of the consultation does not necessarily mean that the IASB is contemplating a complete rethink of business combinations accounting. The RfI emphasises that the IASB will assess the responses received based on the merits of the information, rather than on the absolute number of responses on a particular point.

For these reasons, it is important that responses focus on providing the reasoning behind comments being made, highlighting practical issues in terms of usefulness and challenges.

Next steps

We encourage constituents to respond to the RfI, which is open for comment until 30 May 2014. Publication of the findings and the IASB’s responses is expected in the last quarter of 2014. Depending on the responses, the IASB might decide to retain the existing requirements, to continue to monitor implementation issues, or to revise the standard.

For more information on the RfI, please go to the IASB press release or speak to your usual KPMG contact.

© 2014 KPMG IFRG Limited, a UK company, limited by guarantee. All rights reserved. The KPMG name, logo and “cutting through complexity” are registered trademarks or trademarks of KPMG International.

Publication name: In the Headlines – Review of business combinations accounting

Publication number: Issue 2014/02

Publication date: January 2014

KPMG International Standards Group is part of KPMG IFRG Limited.

The information contained herein is of a general nature and is not intended to address the circumstances of any particular individual or entity. Although we endeavour to provide accurate and timely information, there can be no guarantee that such information is accurate as of the date it is received or that it will continue to be accurate in the future. No one should act upon such information without appropriate professional advice after a thorough examination of the particular situation.